Hungary

Hungary is a country in the heart of Europe. Hungary is landlocked like its neighbours Austria, Slovakia and Serbia though it still deserves the nickname "land of waters", as it holds the largest lake in Europe (Lake Balaton) and is crossed by mighty rivers which divide and define its regions. Even its capital city is split by the Danube River, with Buda on the Western side and Pest on the Eastern bank. As well as water to cool off in, Hungary can be the perfect place to keep warm, as it is located over a very active geo-thermic area and has over a thousand thermal water springs and the second largest thermal Lake in the world for bathing (Lake Hévíz). "Taking the waters" for relaxation or as clinical treatment, is an important part of the Hungarian culture.

Hungary is located on the border of three climate zones, thus the country has a continental climate influenced by oceanic climate from the west, subarctic climate from the north and Mediterranean climate from the south. Summers are typically sunny and warm and the general temperature is between 25–30 °C. For a few weeks, daytime temperatures may even reach around 35–38 °C. Winter is cold and the general temperature is between -10–0°C. Spring and autumn are often short and usually wet.

Capital of Hungary

The city of Budapest was formed in 1873 through the joining of Buda, Pest and Old Buda (Óbuda). As the largest city in the Republic of Hungary, Budapest is the country's political, cultural and commercial center.

The beautiful Danube River both divides and connects peaceful, hilly Buda in the west and the flatter, lively Pest in the east. Óbuda, the oldest part of Budapest, is also on the west side of the Danube and is an extension of Buda to the north. Seven bridges and two railway bridges join Buda and Pest, and six islands on the Danube are located within city limits.

Hungaricums

Hungaricums are those noteworthy assets from Hungary, which characterise the Hungarians by their uniqueness, specialty and quality, and represent the peak performance of Hungary.

Porcelain of Herend

This Hungarian manufacturing company has specialised in luxury hand painted and gilded porcelain for generations. Founded in 1826, it is still based in the town of Herend.

Busó Festival in Mohács

The Busó March and carnival in Mohács in southern Hungary is an old tradition. People put on fleece cloaks and wooden masks and start bonfires to chase away the winter. The tradition has nowadays spread into a large festival, for which visitors travel to Mohács from all over Hungary and nearby countries

Matyó Folk Art and Halasi Lace

Folk Art from Matyó is well known for the embroideries on souvenirs and villagers' clothes. Matyó motifs are mainly flowers and birds with ornamental plants coloured in red, green, black and blue. Lace from Halas is a 110-year-old handicraft Hungaricum. Mostly used as an exclusive decoration for rooms and hall.

Hungarian grey cattle

This is an ancient beef cattle breed from Hungary. Although nowadays Hungarian grey cattle are kept mainly as tourist attractions in the Hortobágy National Park and other Hungarian national parks.

Puli

The Puli is an ancient breed of Hungarian sheep dog. It is medium-sized and sturdy with a unique corded coat. The Puli is a lively, cheerful little dog who is very loyal to its family. Its innate intelligence makes it easy to train but also gives it a mind of its own.

Wine and pálinka

Hungarian wine has been acclaimed globally for many centuries. There are 22 wine regions in Hungary, and - in addition to restaurants and bars - you can take a taste in wine cellars, wine museums or at the vineyards themselves. Look out for Tokaj Aszú, which Louis XIV famously declared to be the 'king of wines, wine of kings'. One of the most famous red wine area is Villány, which is near Baja.

Pálinka - fiery fruit brandy - is one of Hungary's national treasures. Pálinka is distilled from 100% fruit - without the addition of any alcohol or artificial flavourings. It can be sipped either as a warming winter aperitif or as a spicy summer slurp!

Hungarian cuisine

The mixing of different varieties of meats is a traditional feature of Hungarian cuisine.

Goulash is a stew with more gravy or a soup using meat with bones, paprika, caraway, vegetables (typically carrots and parsley root) and potatoes or various tiny dumplings or pasta simmered with the meat.

Other famous Hungarian meat stews include paprikás, a paprika stew with meat simmered in thick creamy paprika gravy, and pörkölt, a Hungarian stew with boneless meat (usually beef or pork), onion, and sweet paprika powder, both served with nokedli (small dumplings).

Other characteristics of Hungarian cuisine are the soups, desserts, and pastries and stuffed crepes (palacsinta), with fierce rivalries between regional variations on the same dish (such as the Hungarian hot fish soup called Fisherman's Soup or halászlé, cooked differently on the banks of Hungary's two main rivers: the Danube and the Tisza), palacsinta (pancakes served flambéed in dark chocolate sauce filled with ground walnuts) and Dobos Cake (layered sponge cake, with chocolate buttercream filling and topped with a thin slice of caramel).

Hungarian cuisine uses a large variety of cheeses, but the most common are túró (a type of quark), cream cheeses, ewe-cheese (juhturó). We have a typical sweet made from a type of quark (túró): TÚRÓRUDI.

Hungarian food is often spicy, due to the common use of hot paprika.

Baja, the multicolored place

Baja is a multicultural, multi-ethnic town of some 40,000 inhabitants which lies next to the River Danube in the southern Hungarian county of Bács-Kiskun, and is a regional economic, cultural and educational centre. The rich natural environment of the area and the transport links afforded by the Danube have brought new settlers to the town for centuries. The town's rich history has seen people of Hungarian, German, Serbian and Croatian nationality make it their shared home.

Baja and the mediterranean atmosphere

This mediterranean town evokes exactly what I love the most: beautiful sunshine, winding , romantic streets , main square overlooking the riverside and endless swimming in the Danube. Baja is a marvellous place for anybody who loves water and sunshine.

Through the centre of Baja flows a pretty tributary of the Danube, known as the Sugovica. This river offers much-loved sandy beaches in the shade of willow trees, where you can bathe for free. It is the best place for young people to meet up in summer. This is the place to enjoy a summer evening with a mediterranean feel, sitting on the terrace of one of the riverside restaurants, pubs or cafés.

Baja, the capital of fish soup

The internationally acknowledged festival, recorded in the book of world records as well, is a genuine fiesta; the celebration of fish soup and friendship taking place on the second Saturday of July.

Baja is known as the capital town of fish soup, where this local speciality is celebrated with a fabulous festival every July. It all began in 1996, to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the town status of Baja, when instead of cooking in 300 kettles finally 400 kettles of fish soup were prepared. In 2000, two thousand kettles lined up in the town centre and the ardour has not diminished since then; approximately two thousand cooks (local and non-local alike) entertain their guests with the delicious soup.

Within Hungary, the highest amount of fish is consumed here. It might sound peculiar for anyone from afar that a celebration (or even ordinary days) cannot be imagined without the fish soup. This riverside town has become world-renowned for the special dish made of freshwater fish, onions, ground red pepper, cherry-pepper and water, accompanied by so-called “matchstick noodles”.

Jánoska eresztés

On this beautiful day in May, the statue leaves its home: people from the part of town called Szentjános (Saint John) to carry it off to the bank of Sugovica where fancy lighted ships, boats, punts, kayaks and canoes are waiting. Of these, the largest and most magnificent event starts at dusk towards the Trinity Square, brightly lit. People follow the statue of the saint who sacrificed his life for honor on the riverside and on the water. The statue flowing is a permanent symbol of light (candles, torches, fire) , and an expression of belonging together .

Value of nature

Petőfi Island

Embraced by Sugovica and Ferenc Channel, Petőfi Island is the jewel of the city of Baja. The green environment of trees makes it the island of relaxation and entertainment, offering numerous sport facilities, for example a swimming pool and a football pitch. Both cyclists and joggers like the walkway built on the island.

River Sugovica

One of the characteristic natural values of Baja is River Sugovica, which flows from the Danube into the heart of the city.

Gemenc

Across the Danube is István Türr bridge, this is multi-carriageway bridge. Across the Danube Baja's western edge is a gateway to the magnificent wetland forest of the Sárköz and Lower Danube region, the Forest of Gemenc, which is Europe's largest wetland forest. Its notable plant and animal life, and its unspoilt watercourses create a very special atmosphere.

Gemenci Erdei Vasút/ Gemenc Forest Railway

One of the floodplain forest light railway in Hungary is located in Pörböly. The railway departs from Ecotourism Center of Pörböly. The current Gemenc Forest Railway was built in several stages. You can admire the animal life in the forest of Gemenc.

Walk around Baja

Trinity Square and the City Hall

One of the major sights of Baja is the Holy Trinity Square made in mediterranean style with town hall and buildings of the historic downtown decorated in neo-Renaissance style. The square is typically Classical, with some Renaissance, Romantic and eclectic elements. Shops, financial institutions and a Tourist Information Offices function in the buildings. Facing the Sugovica, the town hall dominates the square. A late Baroque Holy Trinity Statue stands in the centre.

The Grassalkovich Palace was reconstructed in a historicizing neo-Renaissance style in the Millennium Year of the foundation of the Hungarian state in 1896. The plaque in the assembly hall commemorates this fact. The beautiful fireplace carved from red marble and decorated with the family coat of arms can be seen in the museum.

Walking Street - Eötvös Street

Opening from the Trinity Square, this street invites walking people with beer gardens and ice-cream shops. Around noon, animal-lovers often feed pigeons that are so typical of the city.

Tóth Kálmán Square

The heart of the Baja stands the bronze statue of poet and writer Kalman Toth who was born in Baja (1831-1881).

Déri Garden

Recreation is at hand in the city's romantic park. The first Hungarian monument for the 1956 Revolution was placed here, as well as the 23-meter high monument for the heroes of World War 1.

Árpád Well

The decorative Árpád Well was erected for the 1100th anniversary of the Hungarian conquest, and also for the 300th anniversary of declaring Baja a town. The taps of the well were named after the leaders of the first Hungarian settlers of Hungary.

Sugovica walkway

The row of restaurants- called Halászpárt- starting at the foot of Sugovica's bridge is the centre of young people's social life. On summer nights a walk here feels like being at a mediterranean seaside. A yacht port and a walkway is to be found here, leading to Türr Memorial, where the Danube and Sugovica converge.

Türr István Memorial, Look-out Tower

The monument commemorates István Türr, a courageous soldier born in Baja, who fought for the country's cultural and economic rise. It was built in 1938. The building is also a lookout, which offers a fascinating view of the bridge on the Danube.

Statue of Jelky András

In the town, you can spot a nice symbol of Baja, the figure of András Jelky with a walking stick, standing on a globe. He was born in Baja, and became a famous world trekker from a journeyman tailor.

Bike bridge

On the new tourist bike routes of Baja, one of the most spectacular parts is the pedestrian and bicycle bridge that connects the Petőfi Island also known as the "green city centre" with the Nagy- Pandúr Island.

Ökopark/Eco park

The Pandúr Eco park in Baja covers more than one hectare where there are interactive paths, a five-storey lookout supplied with telescope and an outdoor cooking place awaiting the picnicking groups and families. The eight stations of the path present the fauna and flora of the Gemenc forest, and the serious topics such as the history of river regulation are presented through interactive and entertaining elements.

Culture and life

The city has some museums and art galleries, most of them with permanent exhibitions. These include the István Türr Museum (exhibits objects of former local life), the István Nagy Gallery (a collection of István Nagy's paintings), and the Bunjevci House (about Bunjevci traditions).

There are three notable educational institutions in the city: Béla III High School, famous for high teaching skills; Eötvös József College, the only top-level educational institution of Northern Bácska, and the German center. A smaller observatory also exists.

Eötvös József College

Eötvös József Főiskola is the town's only Higher Education establishment and it plays a crucial role in the cultural, educational and scientific life of Baja. The institution was founded by Baron József Eötvös in 1870.

The college currently offers courses in two academic fields: Economics and Business Studies, and Education.

the library is close to the dormitory. There is a wide selection of foreign language materials (mostly in English, German, Croatian and Serbian), DVDs, CDs and fiction. There are 63 computers in the library (47 accessible by students), and open-access WIFI and Edurom connections. Students can copy, print, scan or bind documents. The library has a number of rooms for small-group teaching and tutorials in addition to 13 research rooms. The Library website (konyvtar.ejf.hu) offers invaluable information in different languages.

Library opening hours: Monday- Thursday 08:00-16:00 and Friday 08:00- 13:30
